

Performance Commentary

Global and emerging market equities continued to advance in April as earlier central bank flexibility resulted in signs of growth stabilisation. A mixture of Chinese reflation and abating trade tensions supported China and Taiwan in particular. Kon-Tiki remained robust despite a significant underweight to these markets.

We exited Ericsson as the company has successfully executed on its turnaround plan and the mobile equipment market has returned to growth. Turkish Airlines made its way into the portfolio. The new Istanbul airport provides growth opportunities, is strategically located for European/Middle Eastern and Asian transit traffic and has a cost structure similar to the low-cost airlines, ensuring a strong competitive positioning.

Naspers was the strongest positive contributor after announcing they will create a NewCo listing in Amsterdam in order to address the discount to NAV. The Russian grocery retailer X5 surprised with strong operational performance in a difficult market. China Unicom was weak after strong performance YTD as results were slightly disappointing. Golar seems to be held back by the complexity of the investment case.

EM equities are now valued around historical averages, but still at a major discount to global markets. Kon-Tiki's value philosophy is reflected in a significant discount to this, trading at 0.9x P/B compared to 1.6x for EM in general.
