

Performance Commentary

There were no big surprises from the major central banks in October which more or less reiterated their dovish paths. Brazil and Iceland cut interest rates. The IMF lifted the global GDP forecast to 3.7% for 2018 and US and Japanese unemployment rates came in at 17 and 23 year lows respectively. These are all positive indicators for real estate demand but also potentially tighter interest rate policies. The most influential factor was Catalonia's bid for independence, triggering a roller-coaster ride for our Spanish holdings, Colonial and Melia Hotels. The best contributor was IRSA after the favourable mid-term election in Argentina. The company also carried out positive refinancing. Japanese Mitsui Fudosan rebounded on the positive Japanese sentiment in the month. The largest detractor was Brazilian MRV, on speculation that low-income housing subsidies would go to debt repayment. Uncertainties will be removed in November.

The fund bought into Far East Consortium which is based in Hong Kong, but is geographically spread. Business includes investment properties, mainly hotels, and development. It trades at a deep discount. The reporting season has started positively as expected, with good rental and capital value growth. The portfolio still trades at a good discount to substance.
