

Performance Commentary

As the COVID-19 pandemic continued to undermine global growth prospects, the fear in global equity markets released some of its grip in April. Following a firm response by politicians and central banks, certain markets experienced their best month since 1987. Nonetheless, the strong comeback in equity markets does not reflect the deeply depressed levels of global economic activity. SKAGEN Vekst saw a strong contribution from companies whose equity prices had been at depressed levels due to the uncertainty. Investment companies like Bonheur and Kinnevik rebounded as the focus returned to their solid balance sheets. The portfolio detractors were those that continued to be hampered by low energy prices. The largest fall in demand in history followed by historical price movements have created challenging times within the energy sector and companies are taking steps to weather the storm. Royal Dutch Shell was the fund's largest detractor after they reduced their dividend for the first time since WWII, causing their share price to nosedive. SKAGEN Vekst has had a tough couple of months, but continues to be well placed for a global recovery. While uncertainty is still high, markets seem to be pricing in a swift recovery for certain companies and sectors. We believe the outlook for the real economy might be somewhat shakier, however.

The fund selects low-priced, high-quality companies in the Nordic region and from around the world.

The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return.

The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
